University Dedicates New Bell Tower, Mall

The LeTourneau University Board of Trustees dedicated the Jeannette S. Belcher Memorial Tower, the Belcher Campus Mall and the Glaske Carillon and Bells as the institution's centerpiece and as a reminder of its spiritual mission during ceremonies held on May 8.

About 250 LeTourneau University staff, faculty and students, and members of the community, gathered to witness the dedication.

"This bell tower is symbolic of a spiritual benchmark for the University in that it appropriately points upward toward God," said William C. Stegall, vice chairman of the Board of Trustees. "Those who study under its shadow will be reminded of the University's spiritual mission."

Paul E. Glaske, chairman of the Board of Trustees and donor of the carillon and bells said, "When you hear the carillon and bells, don't just think of us, think about what each of us can do to honor and glorify God in our lives."

The University also received congratulatory words from state and local officials. U.S. Rep. Jim Chapman attended, and the University received letters of congratulations from Longview Mayor Martha Whitehead, State Rep. Jerry Yost, Texas Gov. Ann Richards and U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm.

The tower was funded by Elliot Belcher, Jr., of Brent, Ala., a member of the Board of Trustees, in memory of his wife, Jeannette. Belcher and his family were among the guests of honor at the dedication.

Completed in April, the bell tower was designed by Dallas-based architect Richard Flatt. It is made of brick, stands 72 feet high with four faces and has a 15-foot base.

The Jeannette S. Belcher Memorial Tower, Glaske Carillon and Bells and the Belcher Campus Mall were dedicated May 8.

The Elliot Belcher, Jr. and Paul E. Glaske families attended dedication ceremony.

The tower contains the Glaske Carillon and Bells. The four bronze bells were cast in France by the Piccard Bell Foundries, and will chime the hour and quarter hours. The carillons are electronically digitized and consist of 44 notes which can be preset by computerized chips to play a variety of selections or can be controlled by a manual keyboard.

The Belcher Campus Mall includes new lighting, landscaping, benches and plaza and the bell tower. More than 100 trees have been planted in the area.

Dr. Billy J. Harris donated his efforts for the structural engineering of the tower. David Scarborough of Tyler was landscape architect for the mall. Transet Co. served as the major construction contractor and Utz Horticultural Services was the landscape contractor.

Master's Program Set For Fall '92

The Board of Trustees has approved a graduate program at LeTourneau University, announced President Alvin O. Austin.

Students will be able to enroll in a master's degree program in Engineering Management and in Business Administration beginning in fall of 1992.

"We have woven biblical ethics into our curriculum allowing for an ethical perspective to surface that is often lacking in traditional curriculums," said Dr. LaVerne Ludden, dean of adult and continuing education for LeTourneau Education for Adult Professionals (LEAP).

The Board of Trustees also has approved a Psychology major with options for either a bachelor's of arts or bachelor's of science degree.

Encouragement For That Second Chance

I can remember when as a child it was an exciting part of the day to hear the mailman deposit the daily mail. I always anticipated that there might be a personal letter or a favorite magazine. Things have changed. Today, most of our friends and loved ones use the telephone to stay in touch, leaving the mailman to bring mostly bills and throw-away junk mail.

It isn't much different here at the office. The stack of daily mail includes much of what might be classified as "junk" mail. And the personal letters don't always bring good news. Any criticism or suggestions we receive tend to land on my desk.

However, there are times when the mail brings much joy. Just a few weeks ago, in response to a letter I mailed to many of you, I received the following letter that not only made my day, it made my year. I have received permission from Mrs. Alice Jones and Travis Brent Jones to reprint it here:

"Dear Dr. Austin:

I never cease to be amazed at how God knows where we are at all times, even to the point of knowing our thoughts. April was the first month I had planned to begin to send a small check each month to LeTourneau, and I wanted it to go for financial aid for needy students. Your letter came asking for this exact thing. I wish you were not such a busy man, as it is necessary for me to make my letter lengthy to give all of the reasons I want to support LeTourneau. I could only afford $10 per month for your "Capture the Vision" campaign last year because of having three children in college for the past two years. However, two are graduating in May and this will free up a little more money.

My son, Travis Brent Jones, is graduating from LeTourneau in May. My, if you only knew what your school has done for him — it has turned his life around. We knew from the first moment we heard the word 'LeTourneau,' that it was God's will for Brent to attend there. However, he was not willing and had to spend two miserable years at a state university before he would give in to God's will. He has had to struggle very hard for his grades at LeTourneau. He did not have high test scores, but was determined to have a degree in electrical engineering. He had left that state university having lost his self esteem, and sometimes I think even his will to continue. We kept telling him that God has a plan for your life, and we know LeTourneau is a part of it, and so he finally came.

In the spring of 1990, he was so discouraged even at LeTourneau, that my husband and I were deeply concerned about him. I prayed for three days, but God would not lift the burden I felt for him. I finally felt I had to call someone at LeTourneau. I had to know that there was someone who would reach out to him and say, 'I care.' I picked up the phone and called Dr. Paul Leiffer, Brent's advisor, and was put right through to him. He said, 'Mrs. Jones, I am so glad you called. I have Brent's file in front of me right now. I was just writing him a note to ask if there is anything I can do to encourage him.' From that moment on, I have known that God has Brent in His hands, and that he would complete that degree no matter how difficult the course. He has, and we have also seen him grow as a Christian beyond anything we had ever hoped for.

"From that moment on, I have known that God has Brent in His hands, and that he would complete that degree no matter how difficult the course."

Your school has been wonderful concerning finances. Both of our other children also go to private schools . . . LeTourneau has given so much aid to Brent, and your cost is so small in comparison. Last May I was told that I am terminally ill. We have had medical payments of $1,800 per month, and with me going on disability. However, we have been able to pay off all three schools. God is so good! I want to add here that I have received cards of encouragement from the engineering department at LeTourneau.

If my health holds, and God is willing, we will be at LeTourneau to see Travis Brent get that degree. You will know me, Dr. Austin. I will be the mother who stands to her feet and gives her son a standing ovation as he walks across the stage. I will also be the mother who will always give God the praise for this accomplishment.

Sincerely, Alice D. Jones"

Mrs. Jones has captured what LeTourneau is all about: caring and godly faculty willing to guide students in their Christian faith, a tough academic program but one willing to give students a second chance, and a commitment to financial aid to help students achieve a LeTourneau education.

Alice Jones was here on May 9 as Brent crossed the stage to receive his diploma. I heard your applause. Brent heard you. And so did God.

Mark Matteson, Mark Landes, Greg Delp, Kent Bell and Fred Ritchey accept trophy.

Aviation Students Take Sixth Statewide Trophy

For the sixth year in a row, a team of LeTourneau University students has won the Ryder Aviall Texas Aviation Maintenance Competition April 4 in Dallas.

Student teams from the 13 aviation schools in Texas competed for trophies and prizes donated by industry and corporate sponsors.

The LeTourneau University team consisted of Kent Bell, Longview; Greg Delp, Southberry, Conn., and Mark Landes, Bemidji, Minn. The team was coached by aviation faculty members Fred Ritchey and Mark Matteson.

The LeTourneau team amassed 2120 total points, edging out Texas Aero Tech, Dallas, and Rice Aviation-Hobby, Houston.

In addition to the cumulative team score, Delp placed third overall among all competitors and second in the electrical division. Landes placed second in the airframe division and third in the general division. Bell placed third in the powerplant division.

Teacher Education Receives Approval

LeTourneau University's Teacher Education program received an initial three-year approval on April 30 from the Commission on Standards for the Teaching Profession.

Students in the LeTourneau University teacher education program will now be eligible for secondary teacher certification in biology, business administration, chemistry, computer information systems, English, history, mathematics, physical education and composite science.

"We look forward to a significant increase in enrollment because this approval will allow LeTourneau University students to take full career advantage of the many strong programs we already have in place, such as English, history and math," said Dr. Sharon Feaster, director of teacher education.

"The Commission's approval will help us to fulfill our goal of preparing caring and compassionate Christian teachers for the nation's school systems," Feaster added.

Campus Development

Campus Undergoes Landscaping Changes

LeTourneau University has undergone many recent landscaping and development changes as part of the three-year Capture the Vision capital campaign. Alumni and friends who have not visited the campus in awhile will be hard-pressed to recognize their old "stomping grounds." Those who remember a campus filled with little else besides the functional-but-hardly-aesthetic military barracks will be most surprised at the changes.

Construction work on the 32,000 square foot Longview Hall Academic Center will be completed by the fall semester.

Longview Hall

Construction is progressing rapidly on the $2.5 million Longview Hall Academic Center.

The 32,000 square foot facility will house the Office of Vice President for Academic Affairs, Office of Microcomputer Services, Office of Special Programs, LEAP Program, Division of Mathematics and Computer Science, and Division of Business Administration, and will also have a number of classrooms and computer labs.

Malloy Associates is the consulting architect and B.B. Reese Construction Co. of Longview is general contractor for the project which began in March 1991. The work is scheduled to be completed by fall of 1992.

Barracks Removal

Last November, bulldozers demolished two of the old barracks buildings, and one more is scheduled to be taken down during the summer months.

In addition to the Bell Tower and Mall, the most noticeable landscaping changes include the redesigned road system and front entrance, the memorial statue of R.G. LeTourneau, and the planting of numerous trees across campus, including the former site of barracks buildings.

Hobart Brothers Receives Plaque

William Kielhorn, associate professor of engineering, presents a plaque of appreciation to Mr. William Hobart of Hobart Brothers, Troy, Ohio, for the company's contributions to LeTourneau University's welding lab. Gifts have included a Motoman welding robot, gas metal arc, shielded metal arc equipment and several tons of E7018 welding electrodes. The presentation was made March 25 at the welding alumni dinner at the Chicago Hilton and Towers during the International Welding Exposition of the American Welding Society.

LeTourneau Hosts Engineers' Banquet

More than 300 area professional engineers, university and high school students attended the regional National Engineers' Week banquet at LeTourneau University Feb. 21.

According to John Busch, LeTourneau University professor of engineering and member of the 1992 Joint Engineers' Week Committee, it was the first time many of those in attendance had been on campus.

LeTourneau's engineering division also hosted an open house which provided an opportunity for University faculty and students to interface with regional professionals and businesses.

"The banquet and open house was an effective way to raise awareness of the University's engineering program," said Busch.

National Engineers' Week is designed to educate the public on the role of engineers and to educate students about careers in engineering.

A Personal Reflection on Missions

By Bill Gibbs
Director of University Relations

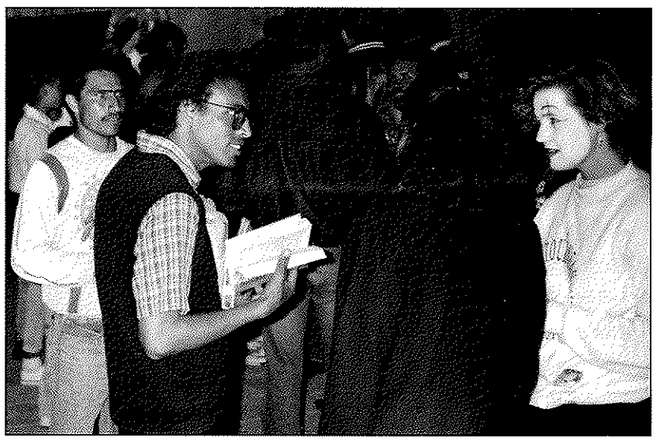
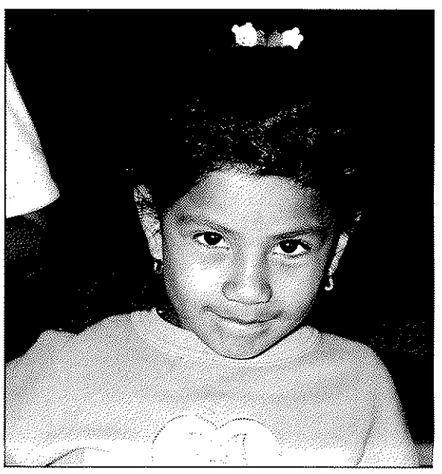
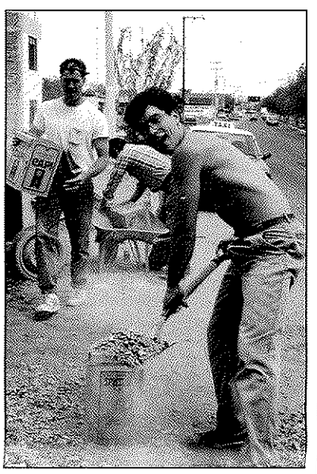
I may be the only LeTourneau University employee whose first day of work was spent sitting on a bus headed away from the school! Shortly after I received a call from Dr. Alvin O. Austin offering me a job at LeTourneau, I got another call. This one was from Dr. David Erickson, vice president for student affairs. "Bill, have you heard that each year the students organize a spring break missions trip? They've heard you are coming, and would like to invite you to go with them to Mexico." My affirmative to that offer found me sitting on a bus that left the University at 7 p.m. and arriving 25 seat-numbing hours later in Aguascalientes, Mexico. My son, David, 14, came down with me from Pennsylvania, where I had been working at another school. As we sat and watched the lights of the traffic slide by, we asked our fellow riders to tell us more about this trip.

I learned a lot during those miles. I found out that about 150 LeTourneau University students had given up their "fun-in-the-sun" spring break plans to minister in six locations in Mexico, three stateside sites and even a group of eight students and a faculty member on their way to Poland. I learned that many of the students had made this trip before, some several times. The students came from a complete cross-section of the University . . . men, women, seniors, freshmen, speakers of Spanish, and those who would struggle to order Coke and a taco. My son and I were part of a group of 25 who ministered in the sunny high plains city of Aguascalientes. Four of the group worked with children in an orphanage. The rest of us spent our days in construction work and our evenings with home Bible studies. Most of the crew worked to construct or repair homes of poorer members of our host church.



I think the thing that impressed me the most was the obvious joy the students took in serving others. John Duda, a senior Computer Science Engineering Major from Sterling, NY comes to mind. Never without a smile, John was happy lifting a shovel, shouldering bags of cement, or speaking broken Spanish with the little kids who thronged to him everywhere he went.





Another scene also comes to mind. At the despedida — our farewell party — one after another of the church members whose homes we had worked on stood to thank us. With tears streaming down their faces they shared their appreciation. One older woman had been living in a tin-roofed shack and was able to move into a two-room brick home that the students had not only built, but supplied a good part of the materials. "My dear Christian friends from North America have forever changed my life. I cannot tell you what you all mean to me." I began to understand why so many students have come to Mexico year after year.

The week passed quickly. As the bus rolled back onto campus nine days after we left, I reflected on what I had learned. I came back from Mexico with a tremendous appreciation for LeTourneau and for its students. There's a perception out there that today's college students are materialistic, self-centered and lacking in spiritual depth. I'm sure some are. But those LeTourneau students I worked with, and with whom I spent long hours on the bus, were an impressive, committed group. And they touched Mexico for Christ in a deeply significant way.

Action in Mexico

Monterrey: Students helped with construction projects and evangelism outreach efforts.

San Luis Potosi: Participants helped with an evangelistic crusade in one church, and did construction work for another.

Aguascalientes: Students worked on construction during the day, then helped with home Bible studies each evening. Part of the group worked in an orphanage.

Nogales (Zacatecas State): Trip participants helped build a church and a basketball court.

La Joya/Cuilonico (San Luis Potosi State): The group backpacked into a remote mountain area, where they assisted with a new water system.

Zacatecas: The team helped get an orphanage underway, and participated in a youth rally.

HCJB, Elkhart, Indiana

HCJB broadcasts the gospel by shortwave to 85% of the earth's population. A group traveled to their U.S. headquarters to solder circuits, assemble winding coils and other tasks necessary to build a transmitter.

Master's Mission, North Carolina

Master's Mission is a training and sending organization for missionaries headed to remote areas. Their project this year was to clear a mountain ridge for a landing strip to be used by training pilots.

JAARS, Waxhaw, North Carolina

JAARS (Jungle Aviation and Radio Service) is the flight and radio arm of Wycliffe Bible Translators. Students worked on aviation-related repairs and projects.

Poland

Dr. Phil Hook took a group of eight students on their first trip to Poland. Hook taught Ecclesiology and Bible in Warsaw while the students participated in the meetings. They also spent time at a seminary in Wroclaw, where they studied Greek alongside Polish students and spent some time at a Christian camp. The team also used the time to study Polish culture and history.

May Graduation Sets All-Time High

More than 2,900 spectators filled the campus grounds May 9 to witness the largest commencement in LeTourneau University's history. The 357 graduates included traditional seniors as well as LeTourneau Education for Adult Professionals (LEAP) students from Longview, Tyler and the Dallas Metroplex.

Speaker Jay Kesler, president of Taylor University, challenged the 1992 graduates to take a stand as "the new centurions," serving as salt and light "to the corporate world, in education, in the community — wherever you may go.

"You will be as sheep among wolves out there," he said, "and the world will be watching how you handle heartache and frustration."

Quoting Henry David Thoreau, Kesler said that Christians should be like those who march to a "different drum," and should be "learning to listen to the cadence of the kingdom of God."

Spring graduates of LeTourneau University line up before the outdoor ceremony held on the campus mall on May 9.

The University also awarded an honorary Doctor of Laws degree to Mr. Elliot Belcher, Jr., member of the Board of Trustees, in recognition of his many years of service to Christian higher education, youth, missions and evangelism.

Stjernstroms Honored at Farewell Reception

Dr. and Mrs. James Stjernstrom and Mr. and Mrs. Nels Stjernstrom were the guests of honor at a farewell reception March 19.

Dr. Stjernstrom worked with LeTourneau University for 17 years. As Vice President for University Advancement, Stjernstrom headed up the University development department which includes the offices of Planned Giving, University Relations and Alumni Relations. He also served as editor of the NOW for many years.

Stjernstrom's future plans are still undecided. "I'm ready for a brand new challenge, and am excited about several possibilities," he said.

Nels Stjernstrom, Jim's father, had been associated with Mr. R.G. LeTourneau since 1964. He had been an administrator for the LeTourneau Manufacturing Co. and the LeTourneau Foundation. He had traveled extensively with Mr. LeTourneau, served as editor of the NOW, and was a member of the Board of Trustees.

He and his wife, Bernice, are retiring and will reside in Minnesota.

Gibbs Appointed for University Relations

William P. "Bill" Gibbs has been appointed Director of University Relations for LeTourneau University, according to President Alvin O. Austin. He replaces Bruce Cook, who is pursuing a full-time doctoral program at the University of Texas.

Gibbs, 39, comes to LeTourneau from Geneva College, Beaver Falls, Penn., where he was director of specialized enrollment, responsible for adult and international student recruitment, and an adjunct instructor in cross-cultural studies. Gibbs had also served as director of public relations and sports information.

Prior to working at Geneva, Gibbs served for 16 years with Wycliffe Bible Translators, ministering in Mexico, Guatemala and several stateside locations.

A native of Montana, Gibbs is a 1974 graduate of Bethany College, Santa Cruz, Calif. He also holds a master's degree in linguistics from the University of Texas at Arlington. Gibbs has received several honors, including a listing in the 1992 Who's Who in the East and a NAIA national ranking for sports publications. He has traveled extensively throughout the United States and Canada presenting public relations workshops for churches and Christian organizations.

Bill Gibbs, Director of University Relations

"We are very pleased that Bill has joined us," said Dr. Austin. "He brings excellent experience in public relations as well as an understanding of the importance of Christian higher education."

Gibbs and his wife, Laurie, have three children, David, 14, Adam, 12, and Kristen, 6.

Alumnus of the Year

Alumnus' Ingenuity Pays Off

Perseverance and technical ingenuity are several of the qualities that LeTourneau University students seem to acquire during their time on campus. Fred Steudler ('64), took those characteristics with him and applied them to his career, with highly successful results.

As the inventor of a revolutionary poultry drinking system that is marketed in all but two countries throughout the world, Steudler credits LeTourneau University with providing him the skills and determination needed to succeed.

However, he almost didn't make it through his first night on campus. You might say he learned a bit about perseverance and ingenuity from his first moments on campus.

When Steudler arrived in Longview, his flight was late and no one met him at the airport. He arrived alone on campus about 2 a.m., carrying his own luggage, and discovered in the dark that he was in the midst of "all these army barracks."

"To put it mildly," he said, "it was kind of a letdown."

Unable to even call a cab, Steudler says he wandered around a bit until he found a barracks building with a window broken out, and saw that inside was a mattress on the floor. He climbed in and promptly fell asleep, then climbed back out in the morning to check in. He joked, "my dorm room didn't turn out to be much better!"

Steudler's decision to come to LeTourneau was confirmed once he began his class work. He knew from early on that he wanted to attend LeTourneau. Steudler had an interest in heavy equipment since he was a child, and his uncle had attended LeTourneau in the 1950s, so he was familiar with LeTourneau's reputation.

"I appreciate LeTourneau because there are not many Christian, technical schools in the country," said Steudler. "I also appreciate what Mom and Pop did for me. As president of the student body, I was able to spend a good amount of time with them."

After he graduated, Steudler went on to earn a master's degree in electrical engineering from the University of Oklahoma. "My LeTourneau education made it easy for me at U of O," he said.

Steudler's first job was as an engineer for Boeing Aircraft in Seattle, where he worked for five years on a guidance system for air to ground missiles. After the economy crashed in 1967-68, and Boeing cut its employees from 120,000 to 28,000, Steudler returned to Pennsylvania where he worked with his father in a screw machine business. He then began "tinkering" with an innovative idea he developed for a poultry drinking system, based on a piped-in, pressure-sensing system in which the bird triggers a pin to get a drink of water. His system provides the birds with fresh water, thereby preventing disease that results from birds drinking from a standing pool of water. Also, the system does not require the cleaning needed with a reservoir system.

Steudler said his new business "just exploded" about five years ago. Val Products now sells half a million units a week, and plans are in the works to open a plant in China soon.

In accepting the honor of being 1992 Alumnus of the Year, Steudler said he recommends LeTourneau to any prospective student. "This country needs more technical people, and it definitely needs more Christians. LeTourneau is one of the few places you can get both."

Longtime Friend of University Passes Away

Hildur Birkelund Jensen, longtime friend and in-law of R.G. and Evelyn LeTourneau, died March 6 at the age of 95. She is survived by her two daughters, Lillian Scobee and Louise LeTourneau, both of Longview, seven grandchildren and 12 great-grandchildren.

Her son-in-law, John Scobee, was an engineer with the LeTourneau Company until his death in 1980. Her other son-in-law, Richard LeTourneau, was president of LeTourneau Manufacturing and is president emeritus of LeTourneau University. Her grandsons, Gil LeTourneau, and Maury and Greg Scobee, are LeTourneau alumni.

Born in Norway on Jan. 4, 1897, Hildur was the thirteenth of fifteen children. She immigrated to America in 1914, and was led to Christ by her sister when their ferry was hit and sunk by a German warship. Hildur first worked as a cook and chambermaid, and in 1923 married a fellow Norwegian, Maurice Jensen, a talented singer and photographer. In 1937, R.G. LeTourneau heard Maurice at Moody Church and asked him to join his team. After Maurice died in 1946, Hildur moved to Longview to help with the newly-founded LeTourneau Technical Institute. She entertained many students during those early years in the "Big House."

Hildur has left behind a legacy of love, servanthood, and a true Christian example.

Alumnus Teaches Students in Korea

Norman Reese ('91) recently took advantage of an opportunity he learned about from assistant professor Dr. Kyun Lee to teach in Korea on a short-term basis.

A mechanical engineering major, Reese spent three months in Korea last summer helping missionary students learn English, before he accepted an engineering position with NASA in Houston.

"My primary task was to help Korean students learn pronunciation," he said. Reese learned of this task when the pastor invited him to visit the seminary. "On the ride over he told me, 'Oh by the way, you'll be teaching English to a class of 50 seminarians.'"

Reese plunged into his new assignment. He found that his LeTourneau education served him well. "Thanks to our engineering program, Buddhist students listened intently to what has changed this space-engineer's life," he said. "Thanks to chapel and Bible classes, several students are on the verge of making Jesus their new master. Spanish class helped with techniques in teaching a foreign language, and computer classes helped with lesson sheets."

Reese said he also learned a few things in Korea. "I am now less ashamed of demonstrating my faith — it's easier to bow my head before a meal."

HOMECOMING REFLECTIONS

The '92 Alumni Homecoming weekend was exciting, interesting and informative. Alumni came from as far away as New Hampshire and Florida, and as near as across the north fence. And no rain!

One reason this Homecoming was special was because Longview Hall, the Memorial Bell Tower and Mall are nearing completion. These structures provided a setting where vision, planning, growth and hard work are evident. Even though there may have been twinges of nostalgia as we thought of the good old days, we want new and better things for those who follow us.

It was a busy weekend for students with Hootenanny, senior engineering EIT exams, lab projects and the Alumni Banquet. But it didn't take long to "catch the spirit" among those who live and work on campus. A Dallas LEAP student was pleased to find that prayer was freely offered at the barbeque lunch.

Open house tours were given of the aviation department, engineering labs, library and bookstore.

Students packed the gym on Friday night. Being a judge for the best Hootenanny acts was not easy. Comments included, "This was the first Hootenanny I've attended in 11 years, and I was impressed," and "I wouldn't miss Hootenanny."

Students were also represented by both the Men's Chorus and the LeTourneau Singers who sang during the banquet program. Folks, they are good!

Fellowship during breakfast on Sunday was inspirational, as was Dr. Ken McKinley's message on Bible prophesy.

We heartily encourage you to come next year and "bring back more memories."

Royce Yoder, President
Alumni Executive Committee

To God Be The Glory!

By John Galiano
Director of Alumni Relations

"Homecoming began with Alumni, Faculty and Staff singing " To God Be The Glory" and ended with Dr. McKinley's sharing how close we are to the second coming of Christ.

Are you ready? Do you have a sense that time is running short to share the Good News of Jesus Christ with friends, family and loved ones?

Are you using your time to bring honor and glory to God in all that you do? Jesus said, " Therefore be on the alert for you do not know which day your Lord is coming... for the Son of Man is coming at an hour when you do not think He will." Matt. 24:42-44

Homecoming 1992 was more than just a lot of fun. It was a time of renewed commitment for all alumni to bring honor and glory to God in all that we do, since we are looking to the Ultimate Homecoming with Jesus in heaven. That is what we all long and hope for.

Please pray with me for a personal renewed commitment to the Lord, and to be obedient to what He calls us to do! God Bless You!

Kieffer Accepts Job in Tennessee

Roger Kieffer, dean of enrollment management, has accepted a position with similar responsibilities at King College in Bristol, Tenn.

Kieffer had spent twenty years of his life and all of his work experience at LeTourneau University. He spent four years as a student, seven as a faculty member in the physical education department and the last eight in University administration.

"There is a sense of pride in seeing one of our own mature from student to faculty to administrator and now be in a position to take and share some of his education and experience with a sister Christian institution," said President Alvin O. Austin. "We rejoice with the Kieffers as they launch out on these new experiences."

Kieffer said he is excited about the new challenges at King College, as well as the fact that he and his family will be closer to their "roots" in eastern Pennsylvania.

Roger Kieffer

"After 20 years," he said, "it is time to move on and plow new ground. I will always be, first and last, a LeTourneau man. I will always feel good about my part here, both as teacher and coach, and most recently in assisting with the enrollment efforts.

"I leave a lot of myself behind at LeTourneau, and I take a lot of LeTourneau with me."

Diehl Takes New Coaching Assignment

LeTourneau University Director of Athletics Dave Diehl has accepted a position as soccer coach and physical education teacher at Northwest Nazarene College in Nampa, Idaho.

Diehl, who has been soccer coach at the University for seven years, will be assuming his new responsibilities this summer.

"I find it's revitalizing to have a new challenge," said Diehl. "We are excited about this new opportunity."

Diehl said he looks forward to taking advantage of the outdoor recreation found in southwest Idaho, including hiking and snow skiing.

In addition to his coaching responsibilities, Diehl will also serve as summer school director for the College.

A Special Way to Observe Memorial Day

Memorial Day, or Decoration Day as it is sometimes called, is an American tradition first observed in 1868. That year, an organization of war veterans designated May 30 as a time to decorate the graves of slain soldiers and hold memorial services to honor those who gave their lives for their country. Every year at this time, we reflect upon the memory of those whose sacrifice for freedom was total and complete.

During the month of May we also fondly remember others dear to us — perhaps a friend or relative we've admired, respected and loved — whose lives are testimonies of God's faithfulness and examples for us to follow.

Over the years people have discovered in charitable gifts a special way to remember a loved one. Giving in memory or in honor of others can be especially gratifying.

A gift to LeTourneau University made in tribute to another lives on and on, and enriches the lives of countless young students as they integrate faith, learning and living. Memorial gifts are a significant source of support for our mission in Christian education.

Making a gift in honor or memory of another is really quite simple.

We receive many memorial gifts in the form of cash or check. This method is often convenient and helps us fulfill immediate needs, but other contributions may also be specified as memorial or honor gifts.

For some, gifts of appreciated stock, bonds, mutual funds, life insurance policies or inventory items may be a practical way of giving. Some even make memorial gifts through a will or a life income plan.

John F. Martin, Director of Development

Through memorial gifts, precious memories of the past reach into the future and impact the lives of LeTourneau University students. The families of those so honored are notified of the contribution, and each memorial gift is listed in an issue of NOW.

Think for a moment about the special people in your life who have meant so much. Who are those important ones to you?

We have prepared a booklet, "Tributes: Creative Ideas For Remembering Others," to help as you consider giving. Please feel free to request a copy by writing or calling me. I would enjoy hearing from you.

Call or write John F. Martin, LeTourneau University, P.O. Box 7001, Longview, TX 75607-7001, (903) 753-0231.

Being Creative With Planned Giving

Giving cash to charitable causes is sometimes the easiest and quickest way to give, but it's not always best. At LeTourneau, we are happy to help patrons find other methods of giving.

Sometimes our alumni and friends have equipment they no longer need that we would find useful. Others can locate, through an employer or business contact, depreciated items that no longer fulfill their original purpose but are still in good working order. Past gifts to LeTourneau have ranged from office equipment to a Beech Baron airplane.

Items for which we have an immediate need include a late model passenger car, pick-up truck, and a backhoe with front loader. If you can help us or know of someone who could, please contact us.

We would be happy to visit with you about your gift idea.
